

SITE WORK NEARS COMPLETION

SOUTH CHARLESTON, WV— Workers completing the initial phases of remediation on the former FMC East Plant are preparing to depart West Virginia within the next few weeks as site work comes to a conclusion. The original project scope was to remediate and prepare the property for the Joe Holland Chevrolet and Imports Parts and Service Center and for Holzer Medical Clinic's new facilities. It was later expanded to include the property bordering MacCorkle Avenue.

"We're especially proud that our team of remediation specialists was able to complete the job without a lost time injury, said FMC Project Remediation Manager Jim Bodamer. The Shaw Environment and Infrastructure (formerly the IT Group) site operators completed nearly 25,000 safe work hours since they began work in November, 2001.

"These guys have been giving it all they've got six days a week — often for 10 or more hours each day — without much of a break," said Shaw's Barry Weaver. "We would never have been able to achieve this milestone if safety wasn't our first and foremost consideration," added FMC Site Manager Bob Smering. "We planned to be safe." [See photos inside.]

Work along D Street, including the installation of a new storm sewer for the City of South Charleston, concluded at the end of June and the property was ceremonially turned over to the new "residents" (Joe Holland) in a groundbreaking ceremony on June 21. [See photos inside.] Building construction began shortly thereafter and should be completed in January, 2003. The Holzer Medical expansion will occur on the East Plant property just behind the existing facility. A building construction schedule has not been set.

When asked how anxious Shaw workers might be to return to their respective homes, Barry thoughtfully responded: "West Virginia has been our home for the last nine months. We're moving on to the next project but this has become someplace special to each of us." ☐
